Beware of Ointments for Catarrh That Contain Mercury

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and forever deprive the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on the most desperate cases from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Kline's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. It is sold by all druggists. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

Sold by Druggists. Price 50c per bottle. Take Kline's Family Pills for constipation.

Consumption Often Develops From Pneumonia

Consumption readily attacks those who have had pneumonia. Many sufferers from tuberculosis give a history of having had pneumonia. The lungs thus weakened are more easily attacked by the germ that causes consumption. Especially those who have had pneumonia, Eckman's Alternative is the appropriate remedy. Cures of Consumption are accomplished by Eckman's Alternative. But take it in time. There is no reason in waiting until tuberculosis is established. It is never fully valued until sick lungs come. A remarkable recovery follows: (Testimonial from a man known at Eckman's Alternative two years ago. Since taking it, following a bad attack of pneumonia, I have gained twenty-eight pounds, and cannot but be very thankful to you and the Almighty God for the great blessing and change of health it has brought me.)

(Signed) ALVIN THOMAS REILLY, Eckman's Alternative is effective in Bronchitis, Asthma, Hay Fever, Throat and Lung Troubles, and in upbuilding the system. These are certain poisons, gelatinous, or habit-forming drugs. Ask for booklet of careful cases and write to Eckman Laboratories, Philadelphia, Pa., for more evidence. For sale by all leading druggists and dealers.

Now that our new plan of giving FREE FURNITURE with all purchases has developed into a triumphant SUCCESS, we can tell you an interesting secret. We THOUGHT of this plan FOR YEARS before advertising it. Frankly, we were afraid of it. The business men we discussed it with DISCOURAGED us from advertising it. They said, "it will CHEAPEN your store and reputation. No matter how truthful your proposition may be, the people will be inclined to DOUBT it. They will quote the old saying that you can't get something for nothing."

We finally answered, "The people have never doubted ANYTHING in ANY Aaron advertisement yet! We've never given them reason for doubt and we NEVER WILL. We can actually give this free furniture by charging it to advertising, chopping down our already slim margin of profits and relying upon volume of increased business to make up for it."

That's exactly what is happening now. We have taken the plunge and THE WATER IS FINE! Come on in! Others are highly enthusiastic over our "free furniture plan." If others find it so good, why don't you at least investigate?

Remember the character of the house that is making the offer. Place implicit trust in Aaron's and you'll never regret it.

This offer goes to credit customers as well as to cash customers. Read the free offers down the side of this advertisement and—act!

Steel Cars in Accidents.

Philadelphia Press.
The steel car demonstrated its value in saving human life and preventing human suffering, to say nothing of life-long injury, in the derailment which followed an accident to the locomotive of the Pennsylvania Limited near Huntingdon, Thursday morning.
The old-fashioned wooden cars, under the conditions, would have almost certainly telescoped, broken and probably have caught fire. The cars were running together in a way which would certainly have led to a terrible crash if a strong car struck. The Pittsburgh gas light tanks would probably have exploded and the fire in the diner would alone have been enough to fire the smothered cars if the gas failed to do its work.

The steel was serious and the walls of steel must cause more serious contusions and superficial wounds than wooden cars, when passengers are flung against the sides of the car, but this is inevitable when sudden arrest comes to a train moving sixty miles an hour. The facilities, the injuries and the danger of fire, which the old-fashioned wooden car would have brought about, are eloquent proof of the wisdom and foresight of substituting steel cars for other rolling stock at the earliest possible moment.

The cost of this has been heavy; it has deterred other railroads, particularly in a period when the expenditure for rolling stock has greatly diminished.
In the ten years ending in 1908, the railroad companies of this country bought freight cars at the rate of 161,000 per year. Last year the purchases were only 100,000. The new cars show a like record. It is true that in both passenger and freight cars the new steel car has much larger capacity than the old wooden car, but at the time which has had the courage, at a road when traffic was greatly diminished, to go on buying steel rolling stock, freight and passenger, on a great scale, will when expansion comes, as it is sure to do before very long, be ready for new business.

The immediate cause of the disaster, the breaking of the arch-bar of the locomotive, will undoubtedly cause the investigation into the character of steel which is being used, both for rolling stock and for rails. The conference on steel rails in New York last week reached no conclusion, but it brought out the fact, of which everyone is aware, that the rolling stock clined to use steel with a high percentage of carbon, in order to secure long wear and rigidity, but gain these qualities at the expense of the greater possibility of fracture.

Pittsburg on the Mink.

Berlin Record.

From the tone of the following anonymous postal card received last week by the Berlin Board of Trade, Pittsburg is looking favorably on a desirable place for business in the opinion of the writer:

"Pittsburg is a dead goose in business; too high taxes; too high cost of living; too much tuberculosis caused by drinking, bathing and washing clothes with foul water polluted by the devil's soil from bathing every street car, theatre, department store, church and school house. Too much smoke causes tuberculosis."

The writer would create the impression that the city of Pittsburg is so foul that whenever an inhabitant takes a bath the foul "soil" finds its way in to streams, thus polluting the water used for domestic purposes. He would also make it appear that even the department stores, theatres, street cars, school houses and churches were menaces to the public health. It is sometimes in the casual reader that the churches were "firing" as a factor in making Pittsburg a "dead goose" in business, while nothing was mentioned about the City Hall and Western Penitentiary. Too much smoke is also cited as a cause of disease, an evil in the writer's opinion which is not conducive to making the city a desirable business point. "Smoke" is the badge of Pittsburg's greatness. One Pittsburger in discussing the smoke problem remarked, that to "eliminate the smoke from the Pittsburg district would be like 'cutting' ladies"—there would be nothing doing in either place.

We would say the information of the writer that Berlin is "quite free from the evils mentioned, our water is pure, our climate is healthful and our 'soil' is not foul," while the smoke from our public works is not a menace at all. In fact, we believe that a little more healthy smoke emanating from the stacks of industrial plants would be good for the community and would be welcomed by our people. The Berlin Board of Trade would gladly consider a proposition from any Pittsburg firm who might desire to locate a factory or public works in our midst, guaranteeing them a healthful climate, pure water and lots of room.

SHORE ACRES.

By Issues of Yukon.

Miss Shore Acres was a metropolitan newspaper reporter who acted in the capacity of an auxiliary cruiser with the wide world for the field of operation.

Miss Shore won fame when she was a small girl, by taking in a fire alarm when the chimney of neighbor's house got constituted and by writing the incident as she saw it for one of the papers.

Prior to this event, she wrote a school essay on "The Empty Hand Crock," which was published and for which the paper gave her a tablet of copy paper.

After the famous chimney smoke, the managing editor sent word to Miss Acres that four of their regular subscribers were down with the measles and asked her to help out. She was pleased to render aid.

Miss Acres once had ambition to be a trained nurse and learn how to gather up the pieces of men who were smashed in wrecks and tie them together and make whole men out of the odds and ends but now she was satisfied to write a story in a rambling way of how such wrecks worked death.

For power consisted in telling how things did not happen better in letters the truth, she was good at giving an idea and then left the readers work their imagination.

Miss Shore was not a sister of Bob Acres whose courage oozed out of his finger and thumb she had courage to stand all the advertising her paper gave her in the way of pictures while struggling with the crowd to get things which were not news.

In order to avoid recognition with so many starting people she wore many different suits of clothing, different hats, rings, face bleach, funeral cotilages and built buckles.

Generalities were her hobby. It was no trouble for her to use six paragraphs in describing the rubber tire on the funeral car, the door knob at the bottom of the dead person and the brand of tobacco which the horse driver used.

Miss Shore Acres had regrets. She regretted she was not present to report the crucifixion, the burning of Rome, the landing of the Pilgrims, the murder of Lazarus, the shooting of Stephen, the white and John and the sundering of Levi. She was sorry that she was not present when Dr. Cook discovered the North Pole, when Franklin flew his kite, when Pulver took his boat trip and when the constant Low Crockett did not to shoot that it would come down.

But she hopes to be present when the National debt is paid.

THIS IS MY 64TH BIRTHDAY.

Admiral Sobres.

Rear Admiral Uriel Sobres, U. S. N., retired, was born in Fayette, Mo., February 20, 1848, and received his early education in the schools of his native town. He graduated at the Annapolis academy soon after the close of the civil war and served aboard various naval vessels and in many parts of the world until he reached the grade of captain in 1901.
He was sent on an Arctic exploration trip in 1872 and later accompanied the Grosvenor expedition to the far north in 1884. He was lighthouse inspector on the Pacific coast from 1885 to 1889.
Later he was in charge of the naval station on the Samoan Islands and in command of the battleship Wisconsin.
Since his retirement from active service two years ago Admiral Sobres has made his home in Southern California.

Senator Lea Opposes Report Exonerating
Stevenson Which Senator Heyburn Supports

SENATOR LEA SENATOR HEYBURN

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19.—Final vote on the committee report in the case of Senator Isaac Stephenson of Wisconsin will be taken Tuesday, February 20. Senator Heyburn of Idaho has given notice that the case will be called on that day and that it is a matter of the highest privilege and that nothing can stand in the way of its consideration.

Senator Luke Lea of Tennessee will make an effort to have the minority report adopted. Five Senators signed this minority report, declaring that Stephenson used too much money in his campaign for the senatorship.

In Buying a Suit
Do You Look for Quality?

Or are you one of the many who notice only the style and let quality and workmanship take care of themselves? The garment that hasn't quality back of it will soon become shapeless and void of style and will give only poor satisfaction for but one season.
On the other hand if your suit is built on quality, you have a suit that is bound to retain its fine style lines, give honest satisfaction for two or more seasons and only at a small advance in price over the cheaper garment. In other words, it's good economy to buy only the best. Such is our buying policy and the woman who comes to this store for her coat or suit will get the benefit of our long experience in choosing quality. Our new Spring styles are now here in all the leading shades and weaves, well styled, and elegantly tailored and marked to sell from $20.00 to $40.00

New Neckwear

New Spring numbers that we know you will like. Just arrived and with them are a lot of novelties in large roses, clusters of flowers, rosettes, daisies, etc., with dangles and buds; also colors at all prices.

New Scrims

Curtain muslins, fancy cre-tonnes and silkolines for spring.
Scrims are shown in bars, stripe and plain in white, cream and ecru at 20c to 30c and a line of fancies in colors at 15c to 25c.
For over draperies see our fancy cretonnes.

New 12 1/2c Gingham

Now is the time to buy your Spring Gingham, and the patterns we are showing offer you a large range of selection. Mostly small checks, bars and stripes with a few large plaids among them. A good lot of dark stripes for skirts and boys' waists. Also in plain and marked at only 12 1/2c

NEWS OF A DAY OVER SCOTSDALE

Intense Evangelistic Services Open in Methodist Episcopal Church.

A GREAT AFTER MEETING

Prominent Italian Business Man Is Out After Protracted Illness—Next Rehearsal For Oratorio Announced. Other Notes of News in Mill Town.

Special to The Courier.
SCOTSDALE, Feb. 20.—The evangelistic services at the First Methodist Episcopal church started last evening very interestingly and powerfully, and there was a large congregation present in spite of the disagreeable weather. There was a quartet of singing, led by the large choir, and there was also solo and a double quartette, and this all added much to the interest. The pastor, Rev. H. S. Piper, although still showing some evidences of his recent illness, preached a sermon which many say they have not heard the equal of in the church for a great while. His subject was "The Sign of the Cross," and tonight he will speak of "On the Palace Seat." There was a great meeting to which all who were concerned were invited to remain, and but few left the house. The after meeting was one of the most powerful ever held in the church, various members telling of conversions and anxieties which were burdening their hearts. There were a number of hymns sung, and the meeting dismissed at an early hour. The start of these services indicate that there will be an old fashioned revival in the Methodist Episcopal church.

VISITING RELATIVES.
Charles Hockenberry, one of Scottdale's cleverest young men, who has been a member of "Along the Kennebec Company" this season, is visiting relatives here.

HOME FROM SCHOOL.
Miss Carrie Hurst, of the Indiana State Normal school, was visiting her parents over Sunday.

DOWN IN HEAVEN.

Rev. W. H. Miller, pastor of the United Presbyterian church, has returned from a visit with old home friends in Beaver county.

IN NEW YORK.
Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Overholt are visiting in New York this week.

ABLE TO BE OUT.
Michael Maglieri, the prominent Italian business man, was able to be in town yesterday from his home in East Scottdale, after having been confined to his home for nearly two weeks with throat trouble. Mr. Maglieri's many friends were glad to see him, and he told them that this was the hardest winter he has ever known.

GAVE A SMOKER.
There was a little start party and smoker given at the home of L. W. Greter on Mulberry street on Sunday, at which were present a number of representatives of the Knight motor people, who move several times on this type of motor. Peter Shockey and Mr. Greter were the ones present from here.

IN NEW YORK.
Miss Kathryn Murphy, chief milliner for the J. S. Parker Company, left yesterday for New York City, where she will spend the week visiting a number of exclusive millinery openings of the leading firms.

ATTENDED BANQUET.
Rev. William G. Russell, pastor of the First Baptist church, was in Pittsburgh attending the ministers' meeting yesterday, and in the evening stopped at a banquet of the Baptist Brotherhood. Rev. Russell responded to the toast "A Man's Religion."

NEXT REHEARSAL.
The next rehearsal for "Christ and His Soldiers," the oratorio which W. J. Burke is giving for the benefit of the Y. M. C. A. building fund, will be held on Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The rehearsal will be held in the field hall. There will be no rehearsal on Monday evening on account of the lecture of George H. Stuart, the next to the last attraction on the lecture course, and which is creating a great deal of interest.

WENT TO PITTSBURGH.
Miss Alice Sidway of near town, went to Pittsburgh yesterday to spend the week visiting with friends and relatives.

MUDDY STREETS.
The thawing weather of yesterday put the streets in nasty condition, and mud was very plentiful, but not so bad as it will be when the accumulation on the streets gets much clearer to the surface. There is a coating of ice several inches thick on the streets, in most places at the present, and the fifth that covers the thoroughfare will make it very unpleasant for people who will have to cross them.

SOUVENIR BOOK FREE.
The magnificent and expensive souvenir book of Scottdale, 122 views and portraits, given absolutely free with every dozen cabinet photos, until March 15, at Springer's Gallery.

Card of Thanks.
The family of the late James Tipple, of Trotter, wish to extend their heartfelt thanks to all those who so kindly assisted them during their late bereavement caused by the sickness and death of their beloved father. Especially do they wish to thank those who sent floral tributes.

Skin on Fire?

Just the mild, simple, wash, the well known D.D.D. Prescription for Eczema, and the itch is gone. A 25 cent bottle will prove it. We have sold other remedies for skin trouble but none that would guarantee as we can the D.D.D. remedy. If the first regular size $1.00 bottle does not do exactly as we say, it will not cost you a cent. Barclay's Pharmacy, Connelldale; J. O. Stouffer, Scottdale.

MRS. GREATON'S AWFUL EXPERIENCE

During Change of Life—How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Made Her a Well Woman.

Natick, Mass.—"I cannot express what I went through during the change of life before I tried Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I was in such a nervous condition I could not keep still. My limbs were cold, I had creepy sensations, and I could not sleep nights. I was finally told by two physicians that I also had a tumor. I read one day of the wonderful cures made by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and decided to try it, and it has made me a well woman. My neighbors and friends declare it has worked a miracle for me. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is worth its weight in gold for women during this period of life. If it will help others you may publish my letter."—Mrs. MARION SWEET GREATON, No. 1 Jefferson St., Natick, Mass.

Change of Life is one of the most critical periods of a woman's existence. Women everywhere should remember that there is no other remedy known to so successfully carry women through this trying period as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (consigned) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

Meyersdale.

MEYERSDALE, Feb. 20.—The great event—the banquet of Meyersdale Lodge No. 76, Loyal Order of Moose, was held in Reich's auditorium last night, and nearly three hundred loyal Moose and their friends surrounded the festive board. The large room was handsomely and appropriately decorated. Dr. W. T. McMillan acted as toastmaster, and many toasts were responded to. The principal address of the evening was delivered by James J. Davis of Pittsburgh, supreme organizer of the Loyal Order of Moose of the world. Following the banquet dancing and cards were indulged in, and the merriment was continued until the wee sma' hours of the morning. A feature of the program was the excellent exhibition of motion pictures furnished by Philip Reich, manager of the auditorium.

B. E. Stone of Sand Patch, the veteran operator, who has charge of one of the tricks at Williams, was showing hands with Meyersdale friends this afternoon.

G. H. Bauman of Sand Patch, was in town on a business errand last evening between trains.

Dr. D. P. Kurtz, a well known osteopathic physician of Johnstown, was here on professional business yesterday.

County Commissioner Millard W. Walker of Somerset, was transacting official business here yesterday.

M. W. Baldwin, P. H. Robley and Harry Weyand of Berlin, were among the out of town visitors to this place yesterday.

Adolph Manhanger of near Somerset, is spending the week with his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. George Landis of Large street.

Harvey L. Pike, one of our popular and successful poultry fanciers, left on No. 5 last evening for Philadelphia to attend the big poultry show which is being held at that place this week. Harvey took with him Giant Bronze Turkeys and Barred Plymouth Rock poultry that were high winners at Madison Square Garden, N. Y., last December, also leaders at Fagers-town, Md., McKeesport, Scottdale and at the show held in Pittsburgh last month.

A number of our people attended the commencement exercises in the Church of the Brethren at Garrett Sunday evening, thirteen of the adult Bible class of that school having completed the course prescribed for the first year and were presented with the Robert Raikes diploma.

SOME NOVELS TOLD IN THE COURIER

A Little Chat About Literary Pleasures That Have Gone Before.

MORE THAN ONE A MONTH READ

In the Past Decade The Courier Has Printed 110 Stories. Most of Them Topnotchers, Too—1912 Promises to Be Best Year Ever.

With prospects of a brilliant year for 1912 as far as serial stories are concerned a resume of the past would not be inapt. For nearly 10 years, since the daily edition was established, The Courier has been giving its readers the best reading matter at the rate of a novel a month. The average is higher than that, for it reaches 15 a year.

One hundred forty novels have been published, from "Rob Ralston's Specimens" to "Peebles." It is a long cry from then until now. A list of these novels is a fair standard of literary progress of the decade. Among the earlier novels were "The South-ers," by Cyrus Townsend Brady, who continues prominent in his field and only last month gave Courier readers "The Challenge of Courage." "When Knighthood Was in Flower," by Charles Major, rich and the novel was subsequently dramatized. It was followed a few weeks later by "Granstar," and "The Courier" printed that splendid story by George Barr McCutcheon while it was still the talk of the country. Two other McCutcheon winners followed, "Beverly" and "The Millionaire." "The wealth of reading matter is much greater than one would expect. The list of novels includes some of the best writings of McCutcheon, Captain Charles King, Louis Tracy, Irving Bacheller, Booth Tarkington, Stewart Edward White, Hallie Flannery, Mary E. Wilkins Freeman, Robert W. Chambers, David Graham Phillips, A. Conan Doyle, Harold MacGrath, Nicholson, M. L. Mitchell, Anna Katharine Green, Frank R. Speelman, Edwin Balmer, Charles Kitch, George W. Cable, Emerson Hough, Louis Vane, Randall Parrish, Katherine Cecil Thurston, Mabel Van Vorst, Stanton-Porter and a host of others.

Of 1912 it is needless to say that the 12 or 15 stories will be up to the usual standard, perhaps a bit above it. On it we looked over the files and saw what a splendid array of literary offerings had been given in the past it was impossible to realize what a high mark must be maintained.

"Peebles" is coming to an end. The succeeding story has been selected. It is required by many as the "Great American Novel" which at last it is a bit better.

"That's the kind of a story to run," says an enthusiastic reader of "Peebles." "The children are getting as much enjoyment out of it as we older folks."

"Peebles" is a remarkable story. The Courier hopes eventually to give its readers the sequel. In the meantime it has engaged a serial story that will prove even more entertaining than "Peebles." It really isn't a story of a love story, this new one, but there is a wealth of humor, character study, romance and adventure that is blended together in one of the finest examples of literary endeavor that has yet been achieved. As to the title "Wait until 'Peebles' is finished and then prepare for an eulogy of the new tale.

To those readers who have not thought it worth while to read our story page it can only be said that daily installments are given of the best contemporary literature.

CHESTNUT BLIGHT DISCUSSED AT HARRISBURG CONVENTION

In Response to Call of Governor Zener, Experts are Planning Research

HARRISBURG, Pa. Feb. 20.—In response to the call issued last month by Governor Zener, representatives of a host of the New England and Middle Atlantic States assembled here today for a two days' conference to consider ways and means to be pursued in the possible control of the chestnut blight, which already has caused a loss of millions of dollars and now is threatening a total destruction of the chestnut forests throughout the country. Participating in the conference are foresters of a number of States and of the United States Department of Agriculture.

The chestnut blight was unknown in the United States until some seven or eight years ago. It was first noticed among the chestnut trees in Central Park in New York city. A short time later the disease was noticeable in New Jersey, in parts of Western Connecticut and even as far south as Pennsylvania and Maryland. By 1907 the United States Department of Agriculture began issuing bulletins on the subject to apprise the public of the spread and to enable the owners of chestnut trees to recognize the disease if it appeared. Incidentally the scientific staff tried to discover a remedy. Foresters, mycologists and plant pathologists all took a hand but nothing availed.

By 1909 the disease had done not less than $12,000,000 damage in the three States of New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania, according to the estimate then made by the Pennsylvania Forestry Commission, and this figure regarded as a very conservative figure. In 1911, only two years later, the disease was reported by the Department of Agriculture as having spread out until Western Pennsylvania, Virginia and West Virginia were included on the south, while northerly it had pushed up the Hudson river valley, and eastward into Massachusetts and Rhode Island. Now the experts declare that unless a remedy is found, it is but a question of a short time until the disease has wiped out all of the Chestnut trees in the States, named and probably in Vermont, New Hampshire, Delaware, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Kentucky, Mississippi, Tennessee, Ohio, Indiana and Michigan.

Minnesota Commercial Clubs Meet. MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. Feb. 20.—Delegates representing commercial clubs throughout the State are in attendance at the fourth annual convention of the Minnesota Association of Commercial Clubs, which opened here today at the West Hotel. Many important matters are scheduled for discussion by noted experts.

Beekeepers in Session. WINONA, Minn. Feb. 20.—Beekeepers of southeastern Minnesota and western Wisconsin met here today for the annual convention of their association. The sessions will continue two days and will be devoted to the discussion of all phases of bee culture and the production of honey for the market.

Monument Unveiling Postponed. LAKE CITY, Pa. Feb. 20.—Forty-eight years ago today occurred the battle of Otuslee, in which Gen.

Seymour's defeat by the Confederates put an end to the Federal expedition into Florida. A handsome monument to commemorate the victory of the Confederates has been completed on the battlefield a short distance east of this city. It was planned to unveil the memorial today on the anniversary of the battle, but for various reasons it has been decided to postpone the ceremony until the State reunion of the United Confederate Veterans to be held here next fall.

FRECKLES

The angel sped laughingly down the hall, and into the street, just as she was.

"I have come," she said to the matron of the home, "to ask if you will allow me to examine, or, better still, to take with me, the little clothes that a boy you called Freckles, discharged last fall, wore the night you took him in."

The woman eyed her in greater astonishment than the case called for.
"Well, I'd be glad to let you see them," she said, "but the fact is we haven't them. I do hope we haven't made some mistake. I was thoroughly convinced, and so was the superintendent.
We let his people take those things away yesterday. Who are you, and what do you want with them?"

The angel looked at the matron fazed and speechless.
"There couldn't have been a mistake," she continued, seeing the girl's distress. "Freckles was here when I looked charge, ten years ago. These people had it all proved plain as day that he belonged to them. They had him traced to where he ran away down a Illinois last fall, and there they completely lost track of him. I'm sorry you seem so terribly disappointed, but it was all right. The man was his uncle, and as like the boy as he could possibly be. He was almost killed to go back without him. If you know where Freckles is, they'd give big money to find out."

"Who are they?" stammered the angel. "There are they going back to?"

"They are Irish folks," said the matron. "They have been in Chicago and over the country for the last three months, hunting him every where.

They have given up and are starting home today. They're—"

"Did they leave an address? Where could I find them?" burst in the angel.

"They left a card, and I notice this morning paper has the man's picture and is full of them. They've advertised a great deal in the city papers.
It's a wonder you haven't seen some thing."

"Trains don't run right. We never get Chicago papers, except the angel.
Please give me that card quickly. They may get away from me. I simply have to catch them."

The matron came back with a card.
"Their addresses are on there," she said. "Both here in Chicago and at their home. They made them full and plain, and I was to take at once if I got the least clew of him at any time.
If they're left the city, you can stop them in New York. You're sure to catch them before they sail—if you hurry."

The matron caught up a paper and thrust it into the angel's hand as she rushed for the street.

CHAPTER XXII.

THE ANGEL'S OLD STORY.

THE angel glanced at the card.
The Chicago address was suitable. Audubon. She said her hand on her driver's sleeve.
"There's a fast driving limit!" she said.

"Yes, miss."

"Will you crowd it all you can without danger of arrest? I will pay well.
I must catch some people!"

Then she smiled at him. The hospital, an orphan's home, and the Auditorium seemed a queer combination to that driver, but the angel was always and everywhere the angel, and her ways were strictly her own.

"I will not let you there just as quickly as any man could with a team," she said promptly.

She clung to the card and paper, and as best she could in the morning, saying each, read the addresses over.

"O'More, suite eleven, Auditorium." "O'More," she repeated. "Seems to fit Freckles to a dot. Wonder if that could be his name? Suite eleven means that you are pretty well fixed suites in the Auditorium come high."

Then she turned the card and read on its reverse, Lord Maxwell O'More, M. P. Killany place, County Clare, Ireland.

"A lord man!" she groaned despair-ingly. "A lord man! But my hospital's coked!"

She blinked back the tears and, sprawling the paper on her knee, read
"After three months' fruitless search, Lord O'More gives up the quest for his lost nephew, and leaves Chicago today for his home in Ireland."

She read on, and realized every word of it. The likeness settled in. It was Freckles over again, only older and elegantly dressed. There was not a chance to doubt.

"Thank you, and wait, no matter how long," she said to her driver.

Snatching up the paper, she hurried to the desk and laid down Lord O'More's card.

"Has my uncle started yet?" she asked, sweetly.

The surprised clerk stepped back on a balcony, and covertly kicked him for being in the way.

"His lordship is in his room," he said, with a low bow.

The clerk showed the bellboy toward the angel.

"Show her lordship to the elevator and Lord O'More's suit," he said, bowing double.

At the bellboy's tap the door swung open and the liveried servant thrust a card tray before the angel. The opening of the door created a current that swayed a curtain aside, and in an adjoining room, lounging in a great chair, with a paper in his hand, sat the man who was, beyond question, of Freckles' blood and race.

With perfect control the angel dropped Lord O'More's card on the tray, whipped past his servant and stood before his lordship.

"Good morning," she said with tense politeness.

Lord O'More glanced her over with amused curiosity until her color began to deepen and her blood to run hotly.

"Well, my dear," he said at last,
"how can I serve you?"

Instantly the angel bristled. She had been so shielded in the midst of almost entire freedom, owing to the circumstances of her life, that the words and the look appeared to her as almost insulting. She lifted her head with a proud gesture.

"I am not your dear," she said, with slow distinctness. "There isn't a thing in the world you can do for me. I came here to see if I could do something—a very great something—for you; but if I don't like you I won't do it."

There was a silken rustle and a beautiful woman with cheeks of cherry bloom, hair of jet and eyes of pure Irish blue, moved to Lord O'More's side and, catching his arm, shook him impatiently.

"Terence! Have you lost your senses?" she cried. "Didn't you understand what the child said? Look at her face! See what she has!"

"I beg your pardon," he said. "The fact is I am leaving Chicago sorely disappointed. It makes me bitter and reckless. I thought it was some more of those queer, useless people that have thrust themselves on me constantly, and I was careless. Forgive me and tell me why you came."

"I will if I like you," said the angel stoutly, "and if I don't I won't."

"But I begin all wrong and now I don't know how to make you like me," said his lordship, with sincere penitence in his tone.

The angel looked into the beautiful woman's face.

"Are you his wife?" she asked.

"Yes," said the woman, "I am his wife."

"Well," said the angel judicially, "the Lord Woman says no one in the whole world knows all a man's big peccies and all his littlenesses as his wife does. What you think of him ought to do for me. Do you like him?"

"Better than any one in the whole world," said Lady O'More promptly.

The angel mused a second, and then her legal tongue came to the fore again.

"Yes, but have you any one you could like better if he wasn't all right?" she persisted.

"I have three of his sons, two little daughters, a father, mother and several brothers and sisters," came the quick reply.

"And you like him best?" persisted the angel with finality.

"I love him so much that I would give up every one of them with dry eyes if by so doing I could save him," said Lord O'More's wife.

"Oh," cried the angel. "Oh, my!"

She lifted her clear eyes to Lord O'More's and shook her head.

"She never, never could do that!" he said. "But it's a mighty big thing to your credit that she thinks she could. I guess I'll tell you why I came."

She laid down the paper and touched the portrait.

"When you were just a boy, did people call you Freckles?" she asked.

"Dozens of good fellows all over Ireland and the continent are doing it today," answered Lord O'More.

"The angel's face lighted with her most beautiful smile.

"I was sure of it," she said winningly.

"That's what we call him, and he is so like you I doubt if any one of those three boys of yours are more so.
But it's been twenty years. Seems to me you've been a long time coming!"

Lord O'More caught the angel's wrists and his wife slipped her arms about her.

"Steady, my girl!" said the man's voice hoarsely. "Don't make me think you've brought word of the boy at this last hour unless you know surely!"

"It's all right," said the angel. "We have him, and there's no chance of a mistake. If I hadn't gone to that home for his little clothes and heard of you and been hunting you and had met you on the street, or anywhere, I should have stopped you and asked you who you were just because you are so like him. It's all right. I can tell you where Freckles is, but whether you deserve to know—that's another matter!"

Lord O'More did not hear her. He dropped back in his chair and, covering his face, burst into those terrible sobs that shake and rend a strong man.
Lady O'More hovered over him, weeping.

"Umph! Looks pretty fair for Freckles," muttered the angel. "Lots of things can be explained. New perhaps they can explain this."

"They did explain so fully that in a few minutes the angel was on her feet, burying Lord and Lady O'More to reach the hospital."

"You said Freckles' old nurse knew his mother's picture instantly," said the angel. "I want that picture and the bundle of little clothes."

Lady O'More gave them into her hands.

"The likeness was a large miniature painted on ivory, with a frame of beaten gold, and the face that looked out of it was of extreme beauty and surpassing sweetness. Surrounded by masses of dark hair was a delicately cut face, with big eyes. In the upper part of it there was no trace of Freckles, but the lips curving in a smile were his very own. The angel gazed as if she could never leave off."

Then with a quivering breath she laid the portrait aside and reached both arms for Lord O'More's neck.

"That will save Freckles' life and insure his happiness," she said possively. "Thank you, oh, thank you for coming!"

She kissed and hugged him and then the wife who had come with him. She opened the bundle of yellow and brown linen and gave just a glance at the texture and work. Then she gathered the little clothes and the picture to her heart and led the way to the cab.

Ushering Lord and Lady O'More into the reception room, she said to Mc-Lean, "Please go call up my father and ask him to come on the first train."

She swung the door after him.

"These are Freckles' people," she said to the Lord Woman. "You can find out about each other. I'm going to him."

And she was gone.

The nurse left the room quietly as the angel entered, still carrying the bundle and the picture. When they were alone the angel turned to Freckles and saw that the crisis was, indeed, at hand.

"Angel," he panted. "Oh, angel!
Did you get them? Are they white?
Are the little stitches there? Oh, angel! Did my mother love me?"

The words seemed to leap from his burning lips. The angel dropped the bundle on the bed and laid the picture, face down, across his knees. She gently pushed his head to the pillow and caught his arms in a firm grasp.

"Yes, dear heart," she said with fullest assurance. "No little clothes were ever whiter. I never in all my life saw such dainty fine little stitches, and as for loving you, no boy's mother ever loved him more!"

A great trembling seized Freckles.
"Sure? Are you sure?" he urged, with clinging teeth.

"I know," said the angel firmly.

"And, Freckles, while you rest and be glad I want to tell you a little story. When you feel stronger we will look at the clothes together.
They are here. They are all right.
But when I was at the home getting them I heard of some people that were hunting a lost boy. I went to see them, and what they told me was all so exactly like what might have happened to you that I must tell you.
Then you'll see that things could be very different from what you have always pictured yourself with thinking."

Freckles lay quiet under her touch, but he did not hear a word that she was saying until his roving eyes rested on her face; and he immediately noticed a remarkable thing. For the first time she was talking to him and doing everything but meet his eyes.
It was not like the angel at all.
It was the delight of hearing her speak that she always looked one squarely in the face and with perfect frankness.

"And he was a sour, grumpy old man," she was saying. "He always had been spoiled, because he was an only son and had a title and a big estate. He would have just his way, no matter about his sweet little wife, or his boys, or any one. So when his oldest son felt in love with a beautiful girl with a title, the very girl of all the world, his father wanted him to, and added a big adjoining estate to his, why, that pleased him mightily."

"Then he went and ordered his other son to marry a poor kind of a girl that nobody liked to get another big estate on the other side, and that was different. That was all the world different, because the oldest son had been in love all his life with the girl he married, and oh, Freckles, it's no wonder, for I saw her! She's a royal beauty and she has the sweetest way."

"But that poor younger son, he had been in love with the village vicar's daughter all his life. That's no wonder either for she was more beautiful yet. She could sing like the angels, but she didn't care. She loved him to death, too. If he was bony and freckled and red-haired—I don't mean that! They didn't say what color his hair was, but his father must have been the reddest ever, for when he found out about them, and it wasn't anything so terrible, he just raved!"

"The old man went to see the girl—the pretty one with no money, of course—and he hurt her feelings until she ran away. She went over to London and began studying music. Soon she grew to be a lovely singer, and then she joined a company and came

CHAPTER XXIII THREE GUESSES

WHEN the younger son found that she had left London, he ran off and followed her."

les was listening most attentively now. "When she got here all alone and afraid," the angel went on, "and saw him coming to her, why, she was so glad she up and married him, just like anybody else would have done.
He didn't want her to travel with the troupe, so when they got to Chicago they thought that would be a good place, and they stopped, and he wanted work. It was slow business, because he had never been taught to do a useful thing, and he didn't even know how to hunt work, least of all to do it when he found it, so pretty soon things were going wrong. But if he couldn't find work, she could always sing so she sang at night, and made little things in the daytime. He didn't like her to sing in public, and he wouldn't let her when he could help himself; but winter came, it was very cold, and fire was expensive. Rents went up, and they had to move farther out to cheaper and cheaper places; and you were coming—I mean, the boy that is lost was coming—and they were almost distracted.
Then the man wrote and told his father all about it, and his father sent the letter back unopened and wrote him to never write again."

"When the baby came, there was nothing left to pay for food and a doctor, and nothing at all for a nurse, so an old neighbor woman went in and took care of the young mother and the little baby, just because she was so nearly for them. By and by they were away out in the suburbs on the long floor of a little wooden house, among a lot of factories, and it kept getting colder, with less to eat. Then the man got desperate, and he went out to just find something to eat, and the woman was desperate, too. She went up, left the old woman to take care of her baby and went into the city to sing for some money. The woman got so cold she put the baby in bed and went home.
Then a boiler blew up in a factory beside the little house and set it on fire.
A piece of iron was pitched across the little house and broke through the roof.
It came down smash, and cut just one little hand off the poor baby. It screamed and screamed, and the fire kept coming closer and closer."

"The old woman ran out with the rest of the people and saw what had happened. She knew there wasn't going to be time to wait for the firemen or anything, and she ran into the house. She could have the poor little baby screaming, and she couldn't stand that, so she worked her way up to it. There it was, all hurt and bleeding. Then she was scared almost to death over thinking what its mother would do to her for going off and leaving it, so she ran to a home for little friendless babies that was near and banged on the door. Then she hit across the street until the baby was taken in, and then she ran back to see if her own home was burning up.
The factory and the little house and a lot of others were all gone. The people there told her that the beautiful lady came back and ran into the house to find her baby. She had just gone in when her husband came, and he went in after her, and the house went down over both of them."

Freckles lay rigid, with his eyes on the angel's face, and she talked rapidly to the ceiling.

"Then the old woman was just sick about that poor little baby. She was afraid to tell them at the home, because she knew she never should have left it, but she wrote a letter and sent it to where the beautiful woman, when she was ill, had said her husband's people lived. She told all about the little baby that she could remember, when it was born, how it was pined for the man's elder brother, that its head had been cut off in the fire, and where she had put it to be decorated and taken care of. She told them that its mother and father were both burned, and she begged and implored them to come and get it."

"You think it would have melted a heart of ice, but that old man hadn't any heart to melt; for he got that letter and read it. He hid it away among his papers and never told a soul a few months ago he died.
When his elder son went to settle up his business he found that letter almost the first thing. He dropped everything, and came, with his wife, to get that baby, because he had always loved his brother, dear, and wanted him back. He had hunted for him all he dared all these years, and when he got here you were going—" mean, the boy was gone—and I had to tell you, Freckles, for you see it might have happened to you like that just as easy as to that other lost boy."

"Angel," said Freckles at last, catching her wrist, "are you trying to tell me that there is somebody hunting a boy that you're thinking might be me? Are you believing you've found me relations?"

Then the angel's eyes came home.
The time had come. She pinched Freckles' arms to his sides and bent above him.

"How strong are you, dear heart?" she breathed. "How brave are you?
Can you bear it? Dare I tell you that?"

"No," gasped Freckles. "Not if you're sure! I can't bear it! I'll die if you do!"

The day had been one unrelenting strain with the angel. Nerve tension was drawn to the finest thread. It snapped suddenly.

"Die," she flamed. "Die, if I tell you that!"
